Communicating with Peers

Practical Activity: Parents Who Do Not Want to Vaccinate their Son

- Problem addressed: parents who do not want to vaccinate their son
- Soft skill: solving conflicts, cultural and diversity awareness
- Method: team-based learning

Individual pre-work: all the participants (approximately 20) are given some material on anti-vaccination movement one week before the meeting and some material reviewing vaccination

Individual Readiness Assurance Test (IRAT): at the beginning of the meeting, all participants must complete a questionnaire on the material previously awarded

Team Readiness Assurance Test (TRAT): now it is the time to form teams and take the same test and submit answers as a team

Clarification session: now it is the time when it is necessary to discuss the different aspects reviewed in the questionnaire

Application exercises: it is time to put in practice what has been learned. Some groups must defend against the rest the anti-vaccine movement and vice versa in a gallery walk

Note: this exercise could be done as a simulation
